"Fingerprints of Creation" and "The Young Age of the Earth"

For decades scientists have advanced the evolutionary theory of the Earth's origins. But have they considered all the evidence? A revolutionary discovery has been found in the Earth's foundation rocks. Lonnie anchors two made-for-television documentaries written and produced by scientist Dr. Robert Gentry www.halos.com (and other experts) who discovered that granites contain beautiful microscopic coloration halos produced by the radioactive decay of primordial polonium, which has only a fleeting existence. According to every basic principle of evolution, these halos shouldn't be there.

EWTN is the largest Catholic cable network in the world. When the Vatican pontiff two decades ago issued his encyclical mandating that evolution is now a viable option to the Genesis 1 account of creation, the nuns who operate EWTN aired this two-part TV series as a mild "protest" to the pontifical dictum! It generated a Niagara of response. These are highly startling scientific and technical videos, but presented in easy to understand terms.

"The Young Age of the Earth" and "Fingerprints of Creation" are Award Winners in the Telly Awards; also in New York Film Festivals; Certificate of Merit in Intercom; and awarded at the Chicago International Film Festival.
